JURY LIST INCLUDES NAMES OF MEN FOR GRAND JURY

Jury Commissioners Edwin Dix and David W. Evans have completed the drawing of the jury list for 1914 in the district court, both divisions. From this shall be drawn 25 names, from them shall be taken seven men to act as grand jurors for the month of January.

The commissioners selected 430 names, 307 of which are the names of residents of Ogden and 123 residents of the county outside of the city, and it is said by County Clerk Samuel Dye that it is one of the best jury lists selected in a long time. He says that the men are representative business men of all walks of life and that the list is freer from men subject to exemptions from jury service and other disqualifications than is usually the case.

Clerk Dye has advised the county attorney and the treasurer that they will be required to draw from the list tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock, thirty-five names for the January service in both divisions of the district court, and also 25 names from which to select the seven men to act as grand jurors. In selecting the grand jury, the twenty-five men drawn for the service will be required to appear before the judges of the district court and be examined by the district attorney as to their statutory qualifications. Those who are disqualified will be eliminated from the second drawing and they will be excused from service for the entire year. From those who are qualified will be drawn the names of the seven men who are to act as the grand jury. The court will appoint a foreman and the jury men will select one of their number to act as clerk, or secretary, whose duty it will be to keep a record of all the proceedings.

Both the grand and petit jury drawers tomorrow will be required to appear before the district court January 2 to receive instructions as to their duties.

Following is the list of jurors for the year:

W. T. Astill, Carl Allison, Vernon E. Allen, J. B. Atkinson, Andrew J. Anderson, Peter Anderson, Olaf Anderson, Peter Anderson, Edward A. Auth, Alma Allen, Burch Creek; Orson Arnold, Hooper; Ammon Allen, Huntsville; John W. Allen, Marriott; Andrew Anderson, Utah.

the other is a handicap match between a top-notch middleweight and a welterweight of the same type.

Tom Long, the southern champion, and Arthur Chester, the well-known Idaho wrestler will meet in the first bout and the $1000.00 purse that has been put up by their backers will be an incentive that will make both wrestlers put up the best that is in them to win. In the latter match Jack Harbertson has agreed to throw George McCloud twice in an hour and as Jack's local admirers know that he will go in from the referees signal, to win the match and from all reports, his opponent, though a welterweight is known to be one of the cleverest wrestlers in the business, this match should give the fans all the excitement they are looking for.

A large attendance is looked for and delegations of fans are expected from Pocatello, Idaho, Brigham City, and a number of Weber county towns. The tournament will begin promptly at 8:30 p. m.

good music and comedy. The two principal roles could hardly be handled better than they were last night in the hands of Sam Loeb and James B. Stanton and, with others in the cast, they received many encores.

The chorus is composed of ten nice appearing and well trained young ladies who possess good voices, dance well and make a decided hit in their several numbers.

The comedy is well staged and costumed and, from the manner in which it was received last night, should continue to play to crowded houses.

THE POWER CHRIST HAS GIVEN TO HIS FOLLOWERS

Musical numbers were furnished yesterday in First Presbyterian church by Misses Scott, Pierce and Hamill.

In the evening sermon, after speaking on the "Virgin Birth of the Christ," Rev. Carver said in conclusion:

"He came to His own and His own received Him not." That was how a gospel writer spoke of the Christ as he remembered how the world had greeted Him. The scene at Bethlehem, when there was no room for the Christ in the inn, and the scene at the close of His life when He was buried in a stranger's tomb were characteristic scenes of His life. In many ways it is a trend of our day to give Him little place. Christmas is the season made glad because of Him and yet oft-times but little of the Christmas joy is for the Christ or His message. Worldly gifts of worldly value, given in a worldly spirit eclipse the remembrance of the gift of God in sending His own son for us and to us.

"But to as many as received Him to them gave He power to become the sons of God." The Christ gives us power to make our own lives and that is all any independent soul asks. He does not do all the work for us, but enables us to work to advantage for ourselves. In other words, He gives unto us a chance to become people of merit.

This is the best evolutionary text we know. Human beings endowed with sufficient power to overcome and develop, have strength furnished to grow into a better life. It may be God gave this power to lower forms of life so that it could develop through long ages, but it is certain that He has given this power unto us through the Christ.

It would be well if we were to think more earnestly upon the real blessings of this brief statement of the Christmas gift and rightly value the gift of power to become worthy children of God for it this power is given unto all who desire it more cannot be asked. It is only the lazy man who is ashamed at working out his own salvation providing he has the adequate power to do so.

We toll for the bodily needs and desires. Most of our labor is to care for bodily wants. We toll for the needs of the heart and many a woman has worked diligently in order to give to the friends Christmas tokens that friendship ties and duties may be faithfully kept. Every demand of our life has its supply but we are prone to overlook the demands of the soul. The thought life too is cared for, but little thought is given to planning for our true characters.

There is too often left to care for itself amid changing environments and fancies. The result is that many grow stronger in body, richer in purse, and their minds enriched in learning, and the hands perfected in skill, but hardly any progress is made in real character and Christian worth. Christmas means the gift from God of power to plan and develop a life as one worthy of the sons of God. This basic gift and fundamental meaning of the day is generally forgotten and a general holiday of little strengthful meaning assumes its place.

At the course of the ship is determined by the desired heaven, as the choice of the technical school is determined by the desired career so our whole life is shaped by our goal in life. Christmas portrays that goal in that it tells of our supreme gift being given when Christ came to make us able to become worthy children of our God. An useless life is an awful waste of opportunity. An unchristian life is a life shorn of its best in all things. An indifferent, shallow Christian life, if such a life be possible is culpable indifference to opportunity. We can do and be so much in life. There is such a demand for earnest sympathetic character that the life that avoids proffered power to become one does so at loss of all that is best.

The day is past, if it ever were here, when the gift of heaven without any effort on our part can be spoken of with enthusiasm. We have learned that "come easy, go easy" rules in spirit riches as in worldly gifts. We need employment if the talents of heart, mind, soul, or body are to be kept idle. In giving us power to become our best and in showing the way to working out our own salvation God in the gift of Christ calls us to an earnest trustful, developing conquering life. Only in Christ can this be done and it is the Christmas gift of power. "To as many as received Him to them gave He power."
